ANNEX

Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council laying down Union procedures for the authorisation and supervision of medicinal products for human use and establishing rules governing the European Medicines Agency, amending Regulation (EC) No 1394/2007 and Regulation (EU) No 536/2014 and repealing Regulation (EC) No 726/2004, Regulation (EC) No 141/2000 and Regulation (EC) No 1901/2006

Recitals

(136) Shortages of medicinal products represent a growing threat to public health, with potential serious risks to the health of patients in the Union and impacts on the right of patients to access appropriate medical treatment, as well as risks to the smooth functioning of the internal market. The root causes of shortages are multifactorial, with challenges identified along the entire pharmaceutical value chain, from quality and safety risks to ~~and~~ manufacturing problems. In particular, shortages of medicinal products can result from supply chain disruptions and vulnerabilities affecting the supply of key ingredients and components. It can also result from a lack of coordination to measures taken at national level to adress risks to supply to cover the needs of patients in a given Member State. Therefore, all marketing authorisation holders should have shortage prevention plans in place, to prevent shortages. The Agency should provide guidance to marketing authorisation holders on approaches to streamline the implementation of those plans.

(137) To achieve a better security of supply for medicinal products in the internal market and to contribute thereby to a high level of public health protection, it is appropriate to approximate the rules on monitoring and reporting of actual or potential shortages of medicinal products, including the procedures and the respective roles and obligations of concerned entities in this Regulation. It is important to ensure continued supply of medicinal products, which is often taken for granted across Europe. This is especially true for the most critical medicinal products which are essential to ensure the continuity of care, the provision of quality healthcare and guarantee a high level of public health protection ~~in Europe~~ within the Union.

(137a) The phenomenon of parallel trade in medicinal products concerns medicinal products traded from one Member State to another Member State or third country . While the Court of Justice has ruled that parallel trade fosters the free movement of medicinal products and is therefore beneficial to the internal market , it has also recognised that the need to ensure that a country has reliable supplies for essential medical purposes, in particular a supply of medicinal products to the public that is reliable and of good quality, may, under Article 36 TFEU, justify a restriction on trade between Member States if that objective contributes to protecting human health and human life. Therefore, it should be possible for a Member State to require, for certain medicinal products, to establish a system of notification whenever one of these products leaves the Member State in question to be distributed elsewhere. On the basis of this notification and the information at its disposal, including shortage prevention plans, the Member State should be able to take measures to mitigate shortages. These measures should also be appropriate and proportionate to such objectives and take into account that the principles of the free movement of goods are restricted only for the purpose of safeguarding public health, thus respecting the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union and the Treaties, notably the provisions on free movement and competition. It is important to recognise that parallel import can contribute to the objective of access to medicines, notably in smaller or vulnerable markets.

(138) The national competent authorities should be empowered to monitor shortages of medicinal products that are authorised through both national and centralised procedures, based on notifications of marketing authorisation holders. The Agency should be empowered to monitor shortages of medicinal products that are authorised through the centralised procedure, also based on notifications of marketing authorisation holders. To ensure continuity of supply and availability of critical medicinal products on the market, rules for the transfer of the marketing authorisation prior to the permanent marketing cessation should be laid down. Such transfer should not be considered to be a variation. When critical shortages are identified, both national competent authorities and the Agency should work in a coordinated manner to manage those critical shortages, whether the medicinal product concerned by the critical shortage is covered by a centralised marketing authorisation or a national marketing authorisation. Marketing authorisation holders and other relevant entities ~~must~~ should provide the relevant information to inform the monitoring. Wholesale distributors and other persons or legal entities, including patient organisations or health care professionals, may also report a shortage of a given medicinal product marketed in the Member State concerned to the competent authority. The Executive Steering Group on Shortages and Safety of Medicinal Products ('the Medicines Shortages Steering Group' (MSSG)) already established within the Agency pursuant to Regulation (EU) 2022/123 of the European Parliament and of the Council, should adopt a list of critical shortages of medicinal products and ensure monitoring of those shortages by the Agency. The MSSG should also ~~adopt~~ propose a list of critical medicinal products authorised in accordance with [revised Directive 2001/83/EC] or this Regulation to ensure monitoring of the supply of those products, to be adopted by the Commission. The MSSG may provide recommendations on measures to be taken by marketing authorisation holders, the Member States, the Commission and other entities to resolve any critical shortage or to ensure the security of supply of those critical medicinal products to the market. Implementing acts can be adopted by the Commission to ensure that appropriate measures, including the establishment or maintenance of contingency stocks, are taken by marketing authorisation holders, wholesale distributors or other relevant entities.

(138a) Monitoring and prevention activities, together with targeted actions at national level, have at times proven to be insufficient to prevent disruption of supply within the Union of critical medicinal products. Experience has shown that difficulties in the supply chain have led to uncoordinated approaches at company and regulatory level [example still to be inserted], which led to restrictions in the internal market. Sucht restrictions are also likely to result in a suboptimal flow of access to critical medicines. It is necessary to ensure that tools for a Union approach are available to address such situations which are likely to lead to such restrictions, in specific circumstances, to ensure the free movement of medicines by safeguarding security of a safe and stable supply of them at Union level. The Commission should therefore be empowered to adopt implementing acts, after having duly identified a serious risk of disruptions and having considered the appropriateness and proportionality of the intervention, notably as regards its impact on fundamental rights, laying down measures of last resort to improve security of supply within the Union. These should be limited to ensuring appropriate contingency stock levels and appropriate supplies of medicinal products to wholesale distributors. While disruptions regarding centrally authorised products can be better addressed by different actors within the supply chain, measures concerning nationally authorised medicinal products should only be addressed to Member States.

(139) ~~To ensure continuity of supply and availability of critical medicinal products to the market, rules on the transfer of the marketing authorisation prior to the permanent marketing cessation should be laid down. Such transfer should not be considered to be a variation.~~
